The Securities Amendment Act, 2007 *

(Bill 19) Chapter 41

The amendments to The Securities Act, 1988 facilitate implementation of Phase two of the "Passport" system of securities regulation in Canada.

Specifically, the amendments enable the Saskatchewan Financial Services Commission to incorporate decisions of other Canadian securities regulators by operation of law and contain a "modified discretion" mechanism that allows the Commission to make a decision based solely on the decision of a regulator in another Canadian jurisdiction. In addition, the amendments:

- create a civil liability regime for secondary market disclosure (i.e., disclosure in the financial market for trading securities that have already been issued in an initial private or public offering);
- create a new power for the Commission to order restitution;
- enhance existing enforcement powers; and
- discontinue the registration requirements for mineral lease brokers.

Most of the amendments came into force July 1, 2007. Section 50 came into force January 1, 2008. Sections 39 to 41 and 51 to 54, and subsection 56(2) came into force February 15, 2008. Sections 25 to 33 came into force March 17, 2008, except the part of section 32 that repeals section 79 which was repealed by section 35 of The Securities Amendment Act, 2008. Section 35 also repealed subsection 56(1). Section 15 and 16 came into force September 28, 2009. Subsection 3(19) and that portion of section 42 that repeals section 117 of The Securities Amendment Act, 1988 came into force April 30, 2010. Subsection 10(3), the remainder of section 42, and section 58 will come into force on proclamation.

The Securities Transfer Act

(Bill 23) Chapter S-42.3

This new Act deals with one aspect of a securities transaction - the transfer of property that occurs in the settlement of a sale or trade of securities. As such, it should be distinguished from securities regulatory law which is dealt with, for the most part, in

The Securities Act, 1988. Prior to the enactment of this legislation, the law relating to the settlement of securities transactions was set out in The Business Corporations Act and The Personal Property Security Act, 1993. The provisions in those Acts are based on the way in which securities were historically held, transferred and pledged in the direct holding system where owners generally held share certificates and had a direct relationship with the corporation issuing the shares.

The new Act repeals the provisions in The Business Corporations Act and The Personal Property Security Act, 1993 and creates a new regime that addresses not only the traditional direct system, but also the far more common indirect holding system where an interest in securities is electronically recorded in the books of a series of intermediaries. The new Act provides a legislative basis for existing market practices and procedures. This legislation is harmonized with the legislation which has been or will soon be implemented in all Canadian jurisdictions as well as the law in the United States.

This Act came into force on September 1, 2007.

The Superannuation (Supplementary Provisions) Amendment Act, 2007 *

(Bill 32) Chapter 11

This Act came into force on March 27, 2007.

The Act contains distinct rules regarding such actions, including the burden of proof, evidence, limitation periods and apportionment of liability.
