Plan for 2012-13

PLAN FOR 2012-13

Statement from the Minister

The Government's Direction and Budget for 2012-13 are built around supporting our sound economic growth so that prosperity can be shared across the province. I am proud to present Social Services' Plan for Keeping the Saskatchewan Advantage, in the coming year and beyond, for our most vulnerable citizens.

In 2012-13, we will build on the progress we have made in a number of critical areas. With our First Nation and Métis partners, we will work to transform the child welfare system. We will continue to implement the Housing Strategy for Saskatchewan, working with housing sector stakeholders to increase supply and affordability. We will focus on making Saskatchewan the best place in Canada to live for people with disabilities by expanding the Saskatchewan Assured Income for Disability program and completing the Waitlist Initiative. Seniors will benefit from increases to the Seniors Income Plan and the new Personal Care Home benefit. These are only a few of the initiatives we will undertake this year to offer better service and a brighter future to our clients throughout the province.

The Ministry will report on progress made toward this plan, within the financial parameters provided, in the 2012-13 Annual Report.

Honourable June Draude
Minister of Social Services

Response to Government Direction

Government has renewed its plan for 2012-13 to encourage and support the Saskatchewan Advantage. This plan reflects the Government's continued focus on economic growth, supporting the creation of new opportunities through strategic investments, ensuring that the prosperity is shared and our quality of life is enhanced. Government's key priorities and commitments have been supported in the context of a disciplined four-year fiscal plan and are presented in the Government Direction for 2012-13.

Government's Vision

"... a strong and growing Saskatchewan, the best place in Canada – to live, to work, to start a business, to get an education, to raise a family and to build a life."

Sustaining growth and opportunities for Saskatchewan people

Improving our quality of life

Making life more affordable

Delivering responsive and responsible government

Government's vision and four goals provide a directional framework for ministries, agencies and third parties to align with these priorities and to develop their plans to achieve greater success in the efficient delivery of government services.

All ministries and agencies will report on results achieved, or not yet achieved, in their 2012-13 annual reports. This honours Government's commitment to keep its promises and ensures greater transparency and accountability to the people of Saskatchewan.

The Ministry's Plan is organized according to four main categories: citizen independence and well-being; learning and renewal; infrastructure and efficient and effective process; and collaborative engagement. These four themes support Government's key priorities and the Ministry's mandate.

PERFORMANCE MEASURES

Measure

Percentage of population 0 to 64 years who receive social assistance

Source: SWIN and Saskatchewan Health Covered Population 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, & 2010

NOTE: Social assistance recipients include beneficiaries of the Saskatchewan Assistance Program (SAP), Transitional Employment Allowance (TEA), and Saskatchewan Assured Income for Disability (SAID) program.

Measure Description

Social assistance provides for the basic needs of individuals and families without alternative means of financial support. Social assistance recipients include beneficiaries from the three major programs. The Saskatchewan Assistance Program (SAP) is designed for families and individuals who for various reasons, including disability, illness or unemployment, cannot meet basic living costs. The Transitional Employment Allowance is an income support program for people who are more job-ready and are seeking employment. The Saskatchewan Assured Income for Disability program is an income support program for persons with significant and long-term disabilities and is delivered separately from SAP. Introduced in 2009, this program is the result of collaboration between the Ministry and disability community.

The social assistance dependency rate reflects the proportion of Saskatchewan's off-reserve population aged 0 to 64 years who depend on social assistance for basic income. This proportion declined from 5.7 per cent in 2005 to 5.2 per cent in 2011.

The social assistance dependency rate may be influenced by changes in population, the state of the economy, demand for labour and disability rates. While many of these factors are external to the work of the Ministry, the relative stability of the social assistance dependency rate over the last five years speaks to the success of the Ministry's efforts in helping its most vulnerable clients to regain and maintain independence. To support the transition of employable clients to economic independence, the Ministry delivers, in partnership with the Ministry of Advanced Education, Employment and Immigration, programs such as Accelerating Connections to Employment, JobsFirst and Employment Service for Parents. Ongoing and planned future work to re-engineer income assistance programs and reposition the Ministry on a new technology platform (Linkin) will improve income supports, decrease complexity, enhance efficiency and most importantly, improve outcomes for citizens.

This measure also reflects Government's achievements in safeguarding vulnerable citizens, and in ensuring an improved quality of life and community inclusion for people with disabilities. The recent increase in the social assistance dependency rate is in part a result of establishment of the new SAID program for people with severe and lasting disabilities. In 2012-13, the program is expected to receive up to 10,000 new clients, which will affect the social assistance dependency rate. The Ministry will review how this measure is calculated and reported in the next reporting cycles.

Measure

Number of children in out-of-home care

Source: Social Services, Monthly Automated Client Index Report and Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada.

NOTES:

The numbers above show the number of active cases on March 31 for each year and include all children in the province who are placed in out-of-home care.

The number of children in care of the Ministry includes all children taken into the care of the Ministry off-reserve as well as those children taken into the care of the Ministry off-reserve and subsequently placed in an out-of-home care resource on-reserve.

The Government of Saskatchewan has delegated the delivery of child protection services for children living on-reserve to First Nations Child and Family Service Agencies across the province. Statistics related to the number of children taken into care on-reserve are received from Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada (AAND) each year. Some numbers are not identical to those previously provided due to reconciliation of expenditures by AAND.

Non-wards are children who have been placed by court order in the custody of extended family members or with other "persons of sufficient interest" with whom the child has a relationship. These children and extended family caregivers are supported by the Ministry.

Measure Description

This measure reflects the Ministry's engagement with, and support of, vulnerable families to ensure children at risk of neglect and abuse are safely sheltered in temporary or permanent out-of-home care. This is consistent with Government's commitment to improve quality of life for all Saskatchewan citizens and families. The measure shows the overall number of cases managed by the Ministry and indicates trends in the Ministry's management of out-of-home care options.

Out-of-home care options for children include placements in foster homes, group homes and residential care facilities, or with extended family members or others with whom the child has a significant relationship. While the recent trend toward stability and even decline in the overall rate is good news, the safety of children and support for at-risk families remain the top priority. The imperative to provide prevention services and care for vulnerable children, including culturally appropriate options for First Nations and Métis children, is paramount.

To the extent that out-of-home placements are necessary to keep children safe and give families time to stabilize and strengthen, the most important story told by this measure may be the degree to which family, social relationships, and culture shape and inform out-of-home care arrangements. In the past five years, the number of non-wards, or children who are placed with extended family and "persons of sufficient interest", has nearly doubled and continues to grow. This is good news. Growth in the number of children in the care of First Nations Agencies is increasing and the number of children in the care of the Ministry is declining. These are positive trends that reflect a deliberate and successful shift in Government philosophy and practice, a stronger voice for First Nations and Métis people, and the increased influence of family, community and culture in shaping the way we care for our children.

Child welfare in Saskatchewan is undergoing a fundamental transformation that is intended to achieve a high level of engagement with First Nations and Métis partners, support and strengthen family structures and relationships, and respect cultural integrity. This measure reflects the degree to which current and future prevention and support work with at-risk and high-risk families is successful in keeping children either safely in their family homes, or placing them in the care of extended family or near social relationships. Success in work to transform child welfare will be reflected in a reduction in the number of children in the care of the Ministry.

Measure

Proportion of children in out-of-home care who are non-wards

Source: Social Services, Monthly Automated Client Index Report

NOTES:

The numbers above are the number of active cases on March 31 for each year. They are calculated by dividing the number of non-wards by all children in out-of-home placements.

The numbers do not include children in the care of First Nations Child and Family Service Agencies.

Non-wards are children who have been placed by court order in the custody of extended family members or with other families with whom the child has an existing relationship. They are not wards of the Ministry but their placement is supported by the Ministry.

Measure Description

When children are at risk of abuse or neglect, it may be necessary for the Ministry to find an alternate living arrangement to ensure their safety and well-being. The Ministry's policy is to place children, whenever possible, with extended family or other caregivers with whom they have an existing and significant relationship.

This measure speaks to the Ministry's contribution to improve the quality of life for Saskatchewan children and families. It reflects the Ministry's commitment to supporting at-risk children and families, and its achievements in integrating new practices that will transform the Province's child welfare system. These achievements illustrate the Ministry's success in ensuring that children in out-of-home care remain closely connected to their extended family. This is especially important for First Nations and Métis children as it ensures a culturally appropriate placement.

For 2012-13, the Ministry will lead and support the ongoing transformation of Saskatchewan's child welfare system in collaboration with First Nations and Métis partners. Among initiatives to emphasize prevention and improve service delivery is an increased level of support for extended family caregivers to help strengthen these placements and reduce the incidence of children returning to foster care.

Saskatchewan Housing completed housing units

NOTES:

Urban communities are those with population of 10,000 and above

Some numbers are not identical to those previously provided due to reconciliation of year-end information or changes in the nature of program delivery.

The chart shows Summit Action Fund (SAF), Affordable Home Ownership Program (AHOP) and Rental Construction Incentive (RCI) for 2011 separately to allow comparison with previous years while highlighting the impact of these new supply initiatives. While there were no completed housing units developed through SAF in 2011, SAF projects that received funding in 2011 are expected to result in the addition of at least 166 new units, with the potential for many more. AHOP & RCI are based on annual cash flowed commitments.

Affordable Rental category includes unit completions under the Rental Development Program, Secondary Suites, and Conversion Programs.

Data presented is for the calendar year, which is consistent with SHC corporate reporting.

Measures Description

Stable and affordable housing enables people to work, engage in education and skills training opportunities, increase their financial savings, and participate in the community. The province's steady economy and growing population have created a strong demand for housing in Saskatchewan communities, including affordable housing options. Saskatchewan Housing's work to address this demand supports Government's direction on economic growth and improved quality of life for the citizens of the province.

While the situation in the housing sector is strongly linked to the health of the economy and market incentives to develop or provide housing for rent, Government actions play a key role in ensuring its balanced development across the continuum of housing needs. These two measures clearly illustrate the positive impact housing-related initiatives and programs have had on Saskatchewan's housing sector.

Since 2006, the overall number of urban housing starts has increased 123 per cent. Increase in the number of rental housing starts was even more dramatic. The number of rental housing units initiated in 2011 exceeded the 2006 level of construction activity in this segment close to 22 times. Allocation of new federal and provincial funding streams has dramatically increased the number of housing units available for low- to moderate-income households.

The 2012-13 Ministry Plan contains additional measures to work with the different partners in the housing sector, to increase the supply of housing and target housing to those in need.
